GREAT MIGRATIONS

A PEOPLE ON THE MOVE

TUESDAYS 8 PM

Beginning January 28

HOSTED BY HENRY LOUIS GATES, JR.

January 2025

ALSO INSIDE

This month on WFMT and WTTW, 2025 commences with an annual tradition: the New Year's concert from Vienna's Musikverein, this year celebrating the 200th anniversary of the birth of Johann Strauss, Jr. and conducted by Riccardo Muti.

From the President & CEO

Dear Member,

Happy New Year! As we usher in 2025 on WTTW, it's a big month for Dr. Henry Louis Gates, Jr. as we premiere a new season of his popular genealogy series Finding Your Roots, and later in the month, we'll bring you a new four-part miniseries also hosted by Dr. Gates, Great Migrations: A People on the Move. The series tells the story of African American movement over the 20th and 21st centuries, and how it has shaped our nation by exploring the meaning behind those movements. Chicago plays a vital role in this history and, on page 4, the producer/directors of the special explain the significance of this story, and how our city became "the promised land" for so many Black migrants escaping the Jim Crow South and other places where they had lived under enslavement and oppression.

Also in January, WTTW will bring you new seasons of some of our most popular programs including Antiques Roadshow, which makes stops at the Crystal Bridges Museum of American Art in Bentonville, Arkansas and Springs Preserve, Las Vegas; NOVA, with episodes that focus on the mystery surrounding UFOs and building the ultimate airport; and the eagerly awaited British series All Creatures Great and Small, Miss Scarlet, Vienna Blood, Death in Paradise, and Sister Boniface Mysteries, as well as The Brokenwood Mysteries, set in New Zealand.

On WFMT, 2025 commences with an annual tradition: the live New Year's concert from Vienna's Musikverein, this year conducted by Riccardo Muti. I hope you'll also watch the performance on WTTW that evening. And this month, WFMT will launch a 13-part weekly series of performances by the renowned Cleveland Orchestra, one of the world's leading ensembles. We'll also bring you live performances from WFMT's Fay and Daniel Levin Performance Studio and other local venues, featuring the Black Oak Ensemble and soprano Laura Strickling with pianist Daniel Schlosberg on Live from WFMT; Howard Levy on Folkstage; and numerous artists in the Dame Myra Hess Memorial Concerts from downtown Chicago.

As we welcome the beginning of a new year, I thank you for watching and listening and for your membership support.

Sincerely,

Sandra Cordova Micek
President & CEO

GREAT MIGRATIONS

A Q&A with series producer-directors Julia Marchesi and Nailah Ife Sims

Since the beginning of time, humans have moved from one place to another, seeking identity, community, and the opportunity for a better life. Migration is a particularly profound aspect of the African American experience, because Black people were denied movement due to centuries of enslavement that robbed them of their humanity. After Emancipation, many African Americans headed north to Chicago. Why here? And did the city live up to its promise?

This new four-part series hosted by Dr. Henry Louis Gates, Jr. tells the story of African American movement over the 20th and 21st centuries. We spoke with series producer/directors Julia Marchesi and Nailah Ife Sims about what compelled migrants to leave behind everything they knew to gamble on the unknown, why they came to Chicago, and how this movement has shaped our nation.

The Guide: What made you want to tell this story?

Julia Marchesi: The Great Migration was one of the most dramatic demographic transformations in U.S. history, and yet the story has not been fully told in documentary format. It is often referenced in other stories about the African American experience in the 20th century, including some of Dr. Gates's other series, but the actual story of how the migration began – how word spread, where people headed, what happened when they got there, and how that movement changed the trajectory of American culture, society, and politics – has not been fully explored.

Nailah Ife Sims: The personal transformative nature of migration is something I've come to know through my family histories on both sides; one with ancestors who've migrated from the South to Chicago, and the other from Haiti to the States. This series was a unique opportunity to contextualize and explore the meanings of those migrations within the larger history of our country, and the ongoing saga of Black America that began as a forced migration. It also feels timely to reflect on these histories, at a time when the term "migrant" is once again part of American discourse.

The Guide: Most people familiar with American history have heard about The Great Migration, but it's plural in the title of this series. Why is that?

Marchesi and Sims: Migration has been a defining aspect of the African American experience and we wanted to underscore the fact that it did not occur just in those sixty years we define as the Great Migration – Black people were moving and striving to better their lives long before that, and still are doing that to this day. Migration never really ends – it just changes direction.

The mass movement north that trickled out in the 1960s actually began to reverse course and produced what we call in the series the “reverse migration” back to the American South. And then of course, we have Black immigration, also an ongoing and deeply significant aspect of the Black American experience. These more contemporary movements continue to redefine what it means to be an “African American.”

The Guide: Chicago is an integral part of this story. How?

Marchesi: Given its central location, Chicago became the easiest to get to, and the fact that it had both job opportunities and a thriving Black community made it one of the most appealing cities for migrants. It took on an almost mythic legend as the “promised land.” It was important to unpack why Chicago became a leading city of the Great Migration story.

Sims: You find dozens of references to it across Black culture, from Robert Johnson’s “Sweet Home Chicago” to Bessie Smith’s “Chicago Bound Blues” to Richard Wright’s Native Son, and more. It was also a known example of what migration could do for Black people in the early 20th century. By migrating north and growing robust communities, or Black Metropolises, such as Bronzeville in Chicago, they created a modicum of freedom and power for themselves that was not yet possible in the South.

The Guide: Through his great-grandniece, we meet the legendary founder

and publisher of The Chicago Defender, Robert Sengstacke Abbott. What role did he play in the mass influx of African American migrants to the city in the early 20th century?

Marchesi: Robert Abbott saw migration as a way for Black southerners to escape Jim Crow oppression and violence, as well as a way to punish white southerners who depended on Black workers. He probably also saw a way to increase his readership as well as to grow the Black community in Chicago. His role was to promote migration, especially after 1917 when he realized how transformative it could be.

The Guide: Chicago as a land of opportunity attracted a number of Black luminaries to the city during the Great Migration. Can you share any of them?

Marchesi: Musicians, especially jazz musicians from places like New Orleans, were drawn to Chicago in the 1910s and '20s. One of the most famous [featured in the series] was Louis Armstrong, who came north in 1918.

The Guide: Is there a story in the series that most resonated with you?

Marchesi and Sims: Learning the true story behind one of the most-used photographs tied to the Great Migration was revelatory for our whole team. Many of us have worked on series about African American history before, and to have the Arthur family photograph re-contextualized, to understand that this was a family fleeing terror, was a humbling experience. Archival photographs hold stories many of us cannot begin to guess.

The Guide: What do you hope viewers will take away from the series?

Marchesi: I hope viewers will consider how complicated our country's relationship has been with both migration and immigration. In this country, we tend to romanticize and celebrate migration and immigration stories only in retrospect. When it is happening, however, the mass movement of people can often be seen as a threatening and destabilizing thing.

Sims: I hope this series helps viewers understand how these brave migrations not only changed the course of their lives and futures, but have pushed American society and culture forward...they continue to, if only we pay attention.

Riccardo Muti

New Year's Day in Vienna

The 2025 New Year's Day Concert will be historic for several reasons. Riccardo Muti, who has guest conducted the Vienna Philharmonic every year since 1971 and has played an important role in shaping the repertoire and sound of the orchestra, returns to lead the New Year's concert for the seventh time. The 2025 program marks the beginning of the commemoration of Johann Strauss, Jr.'s 200th birthday anniversary. A wedding march by Viennese composer and singer Constanze Geiger, a contemporary of Strauss, will be featured in the second half of the program. This inclusion marks a milestone in a concert that until now has lacked female representation.

Wednesday, January 1 10:00 am and 8:00 pm

All prerecorded music on WFMT is provided by the Richard and Mary L. Gray Music Library.

Most live performances on WFMT are broadcast from the Fay and Daniel Levin Performance Studio.

The Cleveland Orchestra

Led by Music Director Franz Welsler-Möst, The Cleveland Orchestra is counted among the world's leading ensembles with notable championing of new composers and commissioning of new works. The 13-week series begins with Mahler's Symphony No. 2, "Resurrection," featuring the Cleveland Orchestra Chorus and soloists Lauren Snouffer and Marie-Nicole Lemieux. On January 20, the chorus returns for Schubert's Mass in E-flat in an inventive program that includes the composer's "Unfinished" Symphony and Berg's Lyric Suite. The third program this month centers American composers Scott Joplin, Julia Perry, William Grant Still, and Raven Chacon.

Listening to Singers

At the age of 19, Marc Minkowski founded Les Musiciens du Louvre. The pioneering ensemble originally specialized in Handel and the French Baroque before delving Classical and Romantic repertoires on period instruments. While continuing to lead his own orchestra, Minkowski has gone on to conduct opera in the major European houses and guest conduct the world's most renowned orchestras. In advance of his debut with Music of the Baroque, the renowned French conductor joins WFMT to share his approach to the three composers featured on the program he will lead in Chicago: Handel, Rameau, and Mozart.
